

the substitute wife: my poor husband is a billionaire

Chapter 671

Chapter 671 The Scorched Woman

Charis closed her eyes and took a deep breath. She always He had been a decisive person. Quickly made a decision, chose the path with less fire and ran away.

As soon as he ran into the fire, he felt as if her skin was melting from her bones. His lungs were full of smoke thick, suffocating her.

Charis was still a long way from the exit. close. He quickly made his way through the sea of fire, her skin blistered in the heat extreme. Soon, the smell of burning cloth filled her nose. Then came an excruciating, burning pain.

Charis let out a piercing scream. Looking at over his shoulder, he discovered that his back it was on fire.

But she didn't have time to to worry. I could only keep running.

Little by little, he exhausted his last strength and his consciousness began to cloud over from the lack of oxygen. Pain consumed every part of her. body, and it even hurt to breathe.

Fortunately, all the accessories and furniture of the haunted house had been reduced to ashes, so there weren't many obstacles in his way. road. He was getting closer to the exit.

Finally, he heard the noise of the crowd gathered outside. Charis felt her heart I was about to stop beating from the pain, but kept running in the direction of the noise, out of sheer willpower. He didn't know how long he had run, but the The sound of the crowd grew louder. Finally, it seemed as if she was surrounded by people. Charis wanted to see what was going on, but I could not open my eyes. It was as if they had glued eyelids. At that time, Charlie he felt a gust of icy liquid splash on his Body. Unable to hold out any longer, he passed out in the act.

Countless firefighters surrounded the house haunted, desperately trying to put out the fire. Because it was Halloween night, many tourists had flocked to the park of amusements and the fire attracted a wave of spectators.

They all craned their necks to see how the fire devoured the haunted house. At that time, one woman on fire ran out the door major. It looked like it was being burned long live, too horrible a sight to contemplate it.

“Oh my God! Is she still alive?!” The spectators were all shocked and instinctively they took a few steps back. Some they even took out their phones to take pictures, while the parents covered the eyes of their children with their hands to prevent them from seeing a such a horrible scene.

When firefighters saw the person involved on fire run out of the establishment, they immediately pointed the hose at him to extinguish the fire in his body.

Fortunately, the fire in Charis's body it went out, but it was already burned and unrecognizable.

It looked like a charred object in the shape of a human.

Immediately after they sprayed her with the hose, collapsed to the ground and passed out.

The helicopter took Janet to an area at a safe distance from the haunted house. As soon As Janet disembarked, she rushed towards the house haunted He ran headfirst into the crowd and headed to the fringes of the haunted house. He looked around but saw no sign of Brandon. Janet got anxious. grabbed the arm from a bystander and urgently asked, “Did you see a tall man in a black windbreaker does one moment?” The passerby shook his head. “No, but there was a woman on fire who came out running from the haunted house a moment”.

Janet felt as if her soul had left her body. He took two steps back and looked understand the burning house in front of her. She and Brandon were separated inside the house haunted a moment ago. had them arranged to escape, but what about Brandon? Was he still trapped inside?

☐ ☐ ☐