The interrogation ended soon enough..

Unfortunately, the Whites weren't able to get any useful information from the man.

What they did know was that the arsonist only had been in contact with his employer over the phone, and that the latter had used a voice changing device

He had never seen the main mastermind in absolute.

They had to admit that this person she was meticulous in covering her tracks.

They had used a burner phone and money transfer. It was done through a third party.

All this was not enough proof for Janet blame it on Charis In fact, if Charis didn't would have appeared and tried to lock her in that small room, Janet would have had nothing against her. However, he couldn't just say that to Brandon, because at the end of the day, I still didn't have evidence to support his accusation against Charis. Now his only chance to frame Charis resided in surveillance footage of the location. That was, of course, assuming they hadn't been destroyed in fire. Holding on to that lightning out of hope, Janet sent someone to retrieve the haunted house surveillance tapes don't you it took a long time to get an update on the matter, although it was far from what wanted to listen.

Apparently, the entire surveillance system was collapsed in the fire, and most of the chambers were reduced to ashes.

There was not way they could get any kind of archive footage.

Janet had no choice to give up this option, since it was an alley No Exit.

His state of mind, which had been so trying to get better, collapsed instantly with the news. It was still there discouraged when Brandon returned with his lunch.

"Here, I bought this at a restaurant. with three Michelin stars. put the food in front to it before adding.

"What happened?" Brandon He had sharp eyes and a keen sense of his environment. I could tell something was bothering her.

Janet opened the takeout box and began to eat.

"Any" she said, avoiding his eyes while chewing.

"This is delicious."

Could not tell Brandon that Charis was behind the fire without any conclusive evidence. I would have to wait patiently for now...

After two weeks, Janet was more than ready to be discharged.

His condition had improved significantly during his stay in Hospital.

But Johanna was still worried. He refused to let his daughter out of the hospital until fully cured.

Brandon stayed a week to take care of her, but had to fly back to Seacisco last week .He had a lot of work

A computed tomography scan was done and a lot of other exams, but all the results showed that there was no problem with your brain.

"I'm afraid I can not Do nothing."

Frank looked at the results of the test and shook his head.

"As for his headaches, I have investigated previous cases of amnesia, but I did not find a patient who You will experience the same symptoms. your case is very special, in fact, I will go abroad for a next medical research seminar week. I'll see if I can get help from others experts."

"Why do you speak to me so formally, of all modes?" Frank asked.

"We were friends, You know? Make sure you get enough rest. avoid think too much about the past.

"In agreement." Brandon's expression softened a bit after hearing that.

In addition to Frank also met with other doctors recommended by the White family.

The doctor who Beal had previously submitted could not help a lot, but never gave up. He made up for his failure by tapping with others renowned doctors around the world.

Even so, no one could do anything to cure the loss of Brandon's memory.

In any case, they only felt curious about his condition.

What, exactly, caused him to lose his memory? And why was it in such a period of time specific? It was almost as if some sinister force was working behind the scenes.
